++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Blustery showers in north. Cloudy with some rain in south.

Today:
Very windy at first for Shetland. Rain stalling across Wales, central and eastern England, becoming heavier for a time later today. Drier, mild and occasionally bright further south. Elsewhere, some sunshine but showers too, these mainly in the northwest.

Tonight:
Rain Wales and central England sinking southwards. Some fog to north with frost parts of northern England and east Scotland. Becoming windier Scotland with rain arriving in west later.

Tuesday:
Dry for most but fairly cloudy, best clear spells to lee of high ground and across central parts. Rain and strong winds in far north.

Outlook for Wednesday to Friday:
Wind and rain in the far northwest quickly easing on Wednesday, leaving a widely dry, settled, and often rather cloudy period with light winds. Mild at first, turning gradually colder.
